Perak

Perak is a Malaysian state on the west coast of the Malay Peninsula, bordered by several Malaysian states and Thailand to the northeast. The capital is Ipoh, historically known for tin mining, with the royal capital in Kuala Kangsar. Perak's diverse tropical rainforests and equatorial climate are part of the Titiwangsa Mountains. The ancient Perak Man skeleton, around 10,000 years old, reveals early human migration patterns. Perak's culture includes traditional dances like bubu, dabus, and labu sayong pottery, with Islam as the state religion and Malay and English as official languages.
